

Law enforcement guide to COVID 19 enforcement

The State and County have begun issuing orders and guidance that close or modify reopened industries. During this process, it is important that law enforcement have an understanding as to what is not permissible in their jurisdiction. At a minimum, law enforcement officers should know that in San Diego County, social distancing and face coverings are required whenever a person is in a business or within six feet of another person who is not a member of their family or household. Additionally, some businesses are not allowed to operate while others may only operate with modifications and restrictions.

Due to the large number of industries that are now reopened, this training bulletin focuses on what is closed. In attempting to determine whether a violation is occurring, a law enforcement officer should look to see if the activity is one of low risk to the spread of COVID-19, and whether it is being conducted with the minimum requirements set by the County of San Diego, and the State of California to help prevent the spread of the virus. Be mindful that many people may not yet be aware of the often-changing rules. First, try to obtain voluntary compliance. If unable to obtain voluntary compliance, Deputies should consider the severity of the violation and whether a citation can accomplish getting the necessary cooperation. If compliance cannot be obtained either voluntarily, or through the issuance of a citation, document the failure to comply in an Ordinance Violation Report.
